Republican Territorial Convention.

Headquarters Republican Central (Committee of New Mexico).

Santa Fe, September 9, 1888.)

A convention of the Republican party of the territory of New Mexico is hereby called to meet in the city of Albuquerque at 10 o'clock in the forenoon on Saturday, October 1, 1888. for the purpose of placing in nomination for the suffrages of the voters of New Mexico one candidate for delegate from New Mexico to the 56th congress.

The several counties will be entitled to representation in this convention as follows:
Bernalillo 27 delegates, Chayes 1, Colfax 7, Dona Ana 10, Eddy 1, Grant 5, Guadalupe 5, Lincoln 5, Mora 11, Rio Arriba, 15, San Juan 1, San Miguel 23, Santa Fe 16, Sierra 2, Socorro 12 Taos 19, Union 4, Valencia 16; total number of delegates 171.

Proxies will not be allowed unless held and voted by cirizens and residents of the same county from which the delegate giving the proxy is sent. Alternates will not be recognized.

County central committees will call regular county conventions for the nomination and election of delegates to this convention at such time and place in the several counties.

County central committees with care county conventions for the nomination and election of delegates to this convention at such time and place in the several counties as in their judgment seems best, provided that all such conventions must be held at least three days prior to the date of the meeting of the territorial convention.

Where there are no regularly constituted county committees, the members of this committee are charged with the duty of calling and holding of the proper county conventions.

Practical politics in Colorado seems to consist in being quick on trigger.

The Democrats of New Mexico are not so cock sure of electing a Democratic delegate to congress as they were three the Republicans nominate? is causing the leaders of the territorial unterrified many sleepless nights.

The czar was a little bit slow with his disarmament idea. The United States inaugurated the idea on May 1, when a portion of one navy was disarmed and continued the good work until the peace protocol between this country and Spain was signed. A more uncalled for, brutal murder has not been committed in the history of anarchists doings, and the severe measures which will undoubtedly be adopted against participants in the plot which culminated in the death of the empress will call for no protests from the civilized portions of the world.

The Brooklyn papers are discussing the knotty problem of "how to avoid an ice famine?" Here in New Mexico at the present time the problem that is worrying the people is, has winter really come or is the cold spell now on only a bluff? The one comfort in the situation is that in the summer time Santa Fe people never suffer from the heat and in the winter the cold days are few and far between. In the north and east the folks are kept guessing whether the summer will be hotter than the winter was cold, or the winter colder than the summer was hot.

From all indications Spain will endeavor to postpone the evacuation of Cubs and Puerto Rico indefinitely by adopting tactics of procrastination in dealing with the American commissioners. That plan may work for a few days, but when the time to appear polite has expired, the American commissioners will begin to "talk turkey" and something will drop. The thud of the drop will be the Spanish officials hunting for quiet spots along the sea coasts where passing vessels can pick them up without attracting undue attention "Manana" is a mighty poor word to conjure with among the "Yarkees."

It is not strange that all the attacks against the San Miguel county commissioners, with which the New Mexican, the Citizen and the little busy Bee, of San Marcial, have abounded, should come from outside of the county and not one word of complaint should be heard from the county.-Las Vegas

There is nothing strange about it. Carolyn Vernet was of that order of omen to whom their admirers are wont o apply such adjectives as "regal," "mag-

To be sure, Frank was bandsome as a prince and brilliant as to wit and talents; was poor, hadn't even "expectations. Early orphaned of both his parents, he was educated for the law by a rich uncle who made it understood that said educa tion was all he meant to give Frank. His presumptive heir was another neph

Well, these considerations had their weight with Miss Vernet, and she had hesitated before accepting the young lawyer, but his attractions of mind and per son proved too much for her worldly wisdom, and it was an engagement. Only she stipulated that it should be no more until Frank should have sufficient income to support her in good style. Of course Frank must needs go away to seek his fortune. He went to Europe. There was a tender parting between the lovers, at which Carolyn was tearful and despondent, Frank brave and hopeful. "Don't think of my absence, dearest," he urged cheerful. "Think of the time when I shall return with a fortune to offer

"Return when you will, Frank," sobbe Carolyn, "you shall find me true. I will wait for you faithfully, dear Frank." Frank Reade went to Europe, and for a month Carolyn was inconsolable.

However, this did not last long, and at the end of a month Carolyn had so far recovered from her grief as to accept an in vitation to Mrs. De Smith's soiree. At that soirce she met Albert Reade that fortunate cousin of Frank's. Mr. Reade was a rather good looking young man. She saw at once that he was lestined to become her adorer. Beside be was Frank's cousin, reason enough Still she did not speak to him of Frank; neither did Mr. Reade allude to his cousin, but Albert was ignorant of Miss Vernet's engagement to Frank. He began from their first meeting to devote himself to her, and Miss Vernet, not being blind, especially to such attentions, did not mis take it, yet she did not discourage him. And when occasionally she heard some comment from "society" not flattering to her constancy she said indignantly: "Of course she must go about with some one, and who could be a more proper escort than Frank's cousin?" So she continued to "go about" with Albert Reade. Of course you see the se-quel. Carolyn loved Frank. Under the fascination of his presence she had yielded her selfishness, but now that he was gone worldliness had resumed its sway, and ambition began to suggest that Albert was a better match than Frank.

"Society," that astute and considerate body, had long foreseen the event and was not in the least surprised when Miss Vernet authorized the information that she was soon to marry Albert Reade, and society thought it a very sensible proceeding And Carolyn married Albert Reade They went to live with Uncle Jenkins who gave the bride a set of diamonds and did the handsome thing generally, and ebody was good enough to send Frank in Europe a paper containing the marriage notice. What a crushing blow to all his hopes that notice was he never told any one. He did not return home, and society was left to forget or remembe him as it would. It chose to remember him, for Carolyn riding on a ferryboat about two years after her marriage, heard a lady and gentle man at her side conversing as follows: "I suppose Maria told you about her friend Frank Reade's good fortune?"

queried the lady.
"No. What about him? I understand that he was rather unfortunate at one time

Then he adopted him, and now he has capped the climax by dying and leaving his im mense fortune unconditionally to Frank. Now, won't that be a bitter pill to the faithless beauty?" Carolyn heard no more, but she had heard enough, and later the story plenty of confirmation. It was a bitter pill to her. But the worst was not yet. In the course of nature Uncle Jenkins died and was buried, and his lawyer came to read the will to the heir presumptive. With serene satisfaction Mr. and Mrs. Reads listened to the following:

"I give and bequeath to my nephew, Albert Reade, all the property of which I die possessed, amounting Here the lawyer paused to wipe his

And he glanced at me as much as to say, "You feel with me, I'm sure." But I did not. I looked at his smug cheeks and gluttonous lips, at his soft hands and bulging waistoost and wished that he might earn waistcoat and wished that he might ears his tidbits in the sun.
